Developing The Winning Edge™

Personal Effectiveness

Sample Mission Statement:

To be the best David Larrick Smith I can be. To always strive to improve myself so that I may better serve my wife, my family, community, and my planet.

Sample Eulogy This eulogy was written in by David in 2007.

David Larrick Smith was a simple man, who said what he meant, and meant what he said. You may not have always agreed with David, but you always felt a sense of respect after talking with him. He often felt fear, but never let his fear stop him from taking action. Often criticized for his position on issues like politics, education, racism, and child rearing; he was quick to take responsibility when he was wrong, and humble when given credit.

He honored his values, and did not compromise his principles. He wants us to celebrate his life and not focus on our regrets, because he had none. David lived a life. As an inspirational speaker David used many catchy phrases. One that he tried to live his life by was: "life is not about having what you want, but more about wanting what you have!" He didn't focus on what he did not have, he appreciated the things and people he did have.

David tried diligently to manifest his God given potential everyday, and to make a difference in the lives of everyone he came into contact with...I for one think he did a great work.
